

The enduring myth of the solitary playground bully – oversized, insecure and in need of standing up to – is getting further and further away from reality. Today's bullies often work in tandem with others to isolate their victims and make their lives miserable. They are often popular, successful and respected students who are skilled at concealing their actions. Perhaps worst of all, they have leveraged technology, bullying through social web sites, texts and e-mail. Perpetrators can cloak themselves in faceless anonymity and victims never get a break. Deprived of the simple reprieve that used to come at the end of the school day, many cases of bullying are turning tragic.

Update! Bullies Changing with the Times

Learn More About

Bullying

Definition
Damage Assessment
Self Assessment
Steps For Improvement

L.A.W. Publications